

Paxton Block Valuation Cut to $525,000

Full Purchase Price Figure Accepted; Other Values Down

Valuation of the Paxton block at Sixteenth and Farnam streets this morning was reduced by the county board of equalization from $710,960 to $525 thousand dollars, the price at which it was purchased by the World Publishing company several months ago.

A. C. Munger, attorney for the company, explained to the board the company is satisfied with the figure, although by law the valuation should be set at 70 percent of the actual value, or $367,500.

That attitude was taken, he explained, because the company does not wish to unsettle downtown valuations generally. County Assessor Joe Stolinski said the company's value was more than fair.

Value of the building was set at 20 thousand dollars, and the ground at 505 thousand dollars, reduced from 50 thousand dollars and 660 thousand dollars respectively.

The board agreed to a revaluation of the property on the southeast corner of Fifteenth and Farnam streets, also owned by the World Publishing company. Original valuation was $162,500, with the company asking reduction to 116 thousand dollars. With County Assessor Joe Stolinski voting no, the board set the valuation at 125 thousand dollars, but reconsidered when Munger asked re-valuation.

Appeal from the 1939 valuation of $162,500 on the property is still pending in the courts.

The board also approved a $12,840 reduction in valuation of the Fontenelle hotel building and lot. Valued originally by the assessor at $492,840, the company asked a cut to $25 thousand dollars. The board set it at 380 thousand dollars.

The Schmoller Investment company, owners of the Regis hotel, Sixteenth and Harney streets, won a valuation cut from 460 thousand dollars to 400 thousand dollars.

The Saunders-Kennedy building valuation was cut from 160 thousand dollars to 135 thousand dollars, although the company asked reduction to 120 thousand dollars. The property at 2004-16 Farnam street, owned by the Central Life Assurance company, was cut from $109,500 to 72 thousand dollars, and the Bus terminal property at the northeast corner of Fifteenth and Douglas streets was cut from 110 thousand dollars to $104,400.

Greatest reduction in tangible personal property valuations this morning went to the Paxton-Mitchell company at 2614 Martha street. Valued at 100 thousand dollars by the assessor, it was cut to $55,320. The company returned a valuation of $51,875.

The Falstaff Brewing company personal property valuation was cut from 65 thousand dollars to 45 thousand dollars, with the company asking $34,958. The Blackstone hotel personal property valuation was cut from 35 thousand dollars to the $27,500 asked.

The Sunderland Lumber company valuation of 40 thousand dollars was reduced to 38 thousand dollars.

C. N. Lammers . . . Smoke expert speaks tonight.

Blames Smoke on Old Plants

Cure Is Slow Job, Expert Says

Obsolescence of heating plant equipment is the primary cause of city smoke evils and gradual education of plant owners to the value of modern mechanical equipment is the only cure, C. N. Lammers, Chicago combustion expert, said here today.

"There is no shortcut to smoke-free cities," he declared. "No town ever eliminated smoke in a short time and none ever will."

Lammers, fuel specialist for the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad, came here at request of the Omaha smoke commission to address a public meeting at 8 tonight at Hotel Regent.

At a luncheon this noon at Hotel Wellington with smoke commission members and city council representatives, Lammers called a morning tour of the city with Smoke Inspector J. A. Brockelsby indicated Omaha's problem is identical with that of all river cities.

"The need for smoke control is emphasized because business and industry are down in a valley, subject to aggravating atmospheric conditions."

Questioning advisability of stringent anti-smoke regulations such as adopted last winter at St. Louis, Lammers reminded that "economies enter the picture and should be considered before too drastic regulations are invoked against heating and power plant owners."

Lammers, who worked with the St. Louis problem, said he believed limitations there on types of fuel and boiler plants were carried a little too far. He said he believed Omaha is on the right track, should continue active inspection, counseling and education.

Defeat Threatens Senator Frazier

Bismarck, N. D., June 26 (AP)—A close three-cornered primary election contest threatened Senator Lynn Frazier with defeat today in his attempt to win re-nomination.

Returns from Tuesday's primary gave Frazier, veteran republican isolationist, 12,562 votes in 495 of the state's 2,200 precincts. State Senator Whelan had polled 12,889 votes in these precincts, and former Governor William Langer 12,146.

Rep. William Lemke, supported by the Nonpartisan league, took a small lead in the republican contest for two congressional nominations.

Returns from 410 precincts gave Lemke 14,756. Rep. Usher Burdick 12,790, James D. Gronna 10,431, and Walter Welford 9,340.

For the republican nomination for governor, returns from 495 precincts gave Lemke T. Orley 18,063, Jack Patterson 16,342.

The first 100 precincts gave Charles J. Vogel for the lead over E. A. Johansson for the senate nomination, 863 to 493.

R. L. Downey and Adolph Michelson were unopposed for the democratic nominations to congress.

Governor John Moses took a 1,364 to 176 lead over C. P. Stone for the democratic gubernatorial nomination in 100 precincts.

How Willkie Busted in Is Historic Tale

Rough and Friendly, He Amazed the City of Brotherly Love

(Continued from Page 1.) he had been a democrat, and that he was mixed up with big business and Wall street and all that stuff. We didn't want any of that stuff in our convention. That stuff was no good for a convention. So we paid no attention to what we heard. We didn't think a fellow who had been a democrat would have the gall to horn into our meeting.

"But here he come a-stomping and a-snorting. Never will forget the day he got into town. Climbed off a train all alone and walked from the station to the Bellevue. Walked into the lobby and headed right for the bar. Big, rough, wild kind of a fellow. Had on 'aggy pants, and looked all dussed up. We had some nice dressy fellows to pick our ticket from in '40, like Tom Dewey and Bob Taft and Herb Hoover and Art Vandenberg and Frank Gannett and a raft of others, and here come a fellow who needed pressing all over.

"Got Acquainted Fast" "The lot of us followed him into the bar to get a close peek at him. We thought what kind of stuff is this, a fellow wanting to be president of these United States and belying up to a bar first crack out of the box? We said we don't want that kind of stuff in our convention with women voting, and all. But there he was saying to the bartender let's have a little drink, just like a fellow who had been up against a bar before.

"Everybody that could get near him had something. He was so big and an inch from his place at the bar when everybody was scurrying and scrounging and trying to say something, and somebody said it was a good thing he was not one of the fellows we figured on picking our ticket from or they would have got lost in the shuffle or knocked down and crippled. We had mostly little fellows that year.

"He Got 'Em" "Then he said let's have another and he began shaking hands all around and every time he shook hands he ruined somebody's dukes. He had a hand-shake like a guy squeezing an orange. He left the Bellevue and went all over town shaking hands and he couldn't pick up a knife or a fork for a week. Sometimes he would slap you on the back and 'ave you coughing. The second day he was in town people were standing all along Broad street bent over coughing like they had h. b.

"He didn't have any delegates when he came to town and he said he didn't know how to get any, but somebody must have told him because before he went to bed he had a bundle of them. He didn't care where he got them, either. He didn't care if somebody else had delegates with a legal brand on them. He just began busting into all the different camps and naming their right and left. Nobody ever saw such a fellow. He had no respect for anybody's delegates.

"Hung Onto Their Pants" "And all the time he was holding and yelling around town and shaking people's hands and hurting them and pretty soon all the fellows we figured on picking our ticket from got so scared they were talking of appealing to Shooey Malone, the Philly superintendent of police. They were afraid that big rough guy might not only take their delegates but wind up robbing them of their pants. Nobody ever saw such a fellow.

"Yes, sir, that was a great convention. Don't ever see things like that nowadays." (Continued on Page 1, King Features Syndicate, Inc. Distributed by International News Service.)

John Coyne . . . "no collusive practices in Omaha."

Sees Level Building Costs

Union Leader Lauds Harmony Here

There will be no sharp rise in building costs in Omaha or this territory as a result of the national defense program, John Coyne, Washington, D. C., president of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor, predicted here today.

Here for a meeting of representatives of international building trades unions with local representatives at the Paxton hotel, Coyne said costs here have become "stabilized."

Coyne said he finds no evidence of "collusive practices" in the building industry in Omaha, as have been investigated in other cities.

He said, whose position makes him head of 19 international building trades unions, is conferring in a closed meeting with the labor representatives on "the building trades' situation in Omaha and this territory." J. L. Gross, president of the Omaha council, arranged the meeting.

Representatives of international unions here are: W. G. Godwin, Des Moines, la., laborers; C. B. Judkins, Des Moines, ironworkers; L. S. Brayton, Kansas City, carpenters; Frank Schlenzig, Philadelphia, plumbers and steamfitters; J. H. Winger, Kansas City, boiler-makers; A. L. Wegner, St. Louis, electricians; Bernard Johnson, Washington, bricklayers; James Egan, St. Louis, painters; J. W. Shirley, plasterers; Ed Walsh, Denver, hoisting engineers.

Here also for the conference are James Brownlow, secretary of the Colorado state federation of labor, and Ray King, president of the Iowa state building and construction trades council.

Upper River Dams Ruled 'Unjustified'

Army Engineer Chief Asks Only One Dam at Republican City

Washington, D. C., June 25 (AP)—Advocates of the upper dams for flood control in the Republican valley in Nebraska suffered a blow to their program today when Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, chief of army engineers, reported to congress no improvements for flood control, irrigation or power developments are justified except a proposed reservoir in Harlan county.

Senator George W. Norris said today there is little likelihood of congressional action on the Harlan county dam project this session. He pointed out the flood control committee must first bring in an authorization bill and, after the approval of that, an appropriation would have to be obtained. The stages preliminary to congressional action were completed by Schley's recommendation.

Say Small Dams Best Representatives of communities in the basin above the proposed Republican City dam have maintained smaller dams and reservoirs upstream and on the tributaries are needed to control the stream.

Various tributaries recently went over their banks as a result of heavy rains and for a time threatened another serious flood of the Republican, but high water of the smaller streams reached the Republican at different times and it was able to carry the torrents with only slight flooding.

Schley said the Nebraska site had been selected for the dam in an originally contemplated.

The proposed dam, according to costly reliable sources, would cost $21,935,000 and its reservoir would submerge the present site of the town of Republican City. It would hold about 1,208,000 acre feet of water, 200 thousand acre feet of which would be available for irrigation below the dam.

Curtis Seeks New Army Study (The World-Herald's News Service.) McCook, Neb., June 25—Congressman Carl Curtis has obtained passage of a resolution by the house flood control committee requesting a review of army engineers' findings on the western end of the Republican river.

Curtis explained: "This resolution is not intended to take away anything from the east end, nor can it be construed as opposition to the proposed Republican City dam, but I do want the army engineers to know that their job is not finished until they have provided flood protection for the entire valley."

Spunk Says Report to Stur New Demands

St. Croix, Neb., June 25 (AP)—H. D. Stunk, president of the Republican Valley Reclamation association, said tonight the report of army engineers ruling out any additional flood control projects on the river save the Republican City dam, will have no effect on supporters of upstream development except to spur new demands for reconderation by congress and engineers of the single on-river dam proposal.

"We know army engineers were going to make such an absurd recommendation and have drawn our plans to appeal to all authorities," Stunk said for his organization, comprised of Chamber clubs in 16 upstream towns.

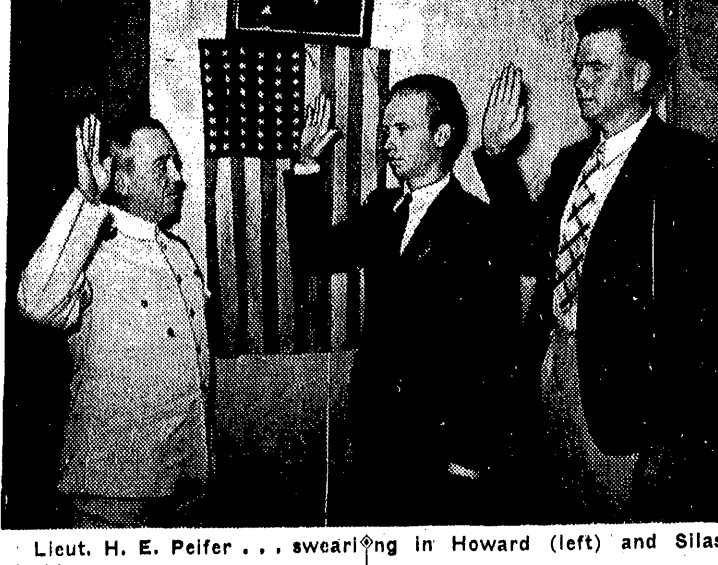

Seeks Annulment of 'Illegal' Marriage

Jack Thomas Barnett, the "husband" in the Papillon, "proxy wedding," in district court today filed a cross petition asking the annulment of his marriage to Ruth Lovinger Barnett and asked a court order showing that he is the father of the year-old child, Thomas Edward.

In a hearing on her suit for divorce recently, they testified another couple stood before the Papillon justice of the peace who read the marriage ceremony. She remained in the car, and he acted as witness.

In his cross petition Barnett stated that "because of the facts and circumstances of the ceremony and procurement of the license, and because both were minors, each 18, neither having parental consent, in fact and truth they were not legally married."

V. J. Belda is Barnett's attorney.

Third-Term Tradition Held Political Myth

The "so-called 'third-term tradition'" for presidents is nothing more than a politician's myth, Dr. Harry Williams, history instructor at the University of Omaha, said today.

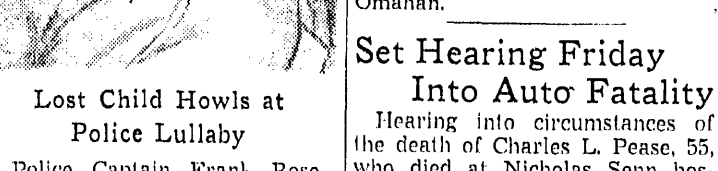

The "third-term tradition" goes back to Jefferson and Jackson, who both refused third terms and hoped thereby to establish a tradition, but there is no proof the electorate approves of this tradition, Dr. Williams declared.

He quoted George Washington, who declared in a letter to Lafayette: "I can see no propriety in precluding ourselves from the services of any man who, in some great emergency, shall be deemed universally best capable of serving the public."

Whimpering, George was brought to the station, a lost child. Rose tried quieting him with a lullaby—in bass. George cried. Rose tried again. George howled. Not until his father came at the end of three hours did George smile.

"Da!" he squealed as his father walked in the door.

Farm Relief Bill Is Signed by Roosevelt

New Measure Boosts Funds for Removal of Surplus Products

Washington, D. C., June 25 (AP)—President Roosevelt signed a $918,603,000 agriculture appropriation bill today which included increased millions for removal of surplus farm products, a problem made more serious by the loss of foreign markets because of the European war.

The fiscal year beginning July 1 included 500 million dollars for farm benefit payments under the soil conservation program and an additional 212 million dollars for crops—wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco and rice. The parity item was not recommended by the budget bureau.

The bill earmarks 85 million dollars for removal of surplus farm products. An additional 35 million dollars also is provided for this purpose in the relief bill now before the president.

In all, the agriculture department will receive $1,195,523,000 from the bill and items included for the department in other measures such as the relief bill.

U. S. Progress Slow in Air Raid Defense

Recent authorization of five anti-aircraft regiments in national guard units of western states will increase the guard's strength in this respect by nearly a third—approximately the initial increase also scheduled for the regular army itself within the next few months.

Mobilization plans call for a very much larger force eventually. As with many other branches of defense, a more rapid current expansion would be welcome. Progress is slow and will continue slowly because we are unable to equip the needed new units with the potent weapons which 1940 warfare has shown to be necessary.

Not yet, in fact, have the approved weapons in sufficient quantity for units already organized, nor will we have them for some months to come.

Our regular army now has seven regiments of anti-aircraft artillery and is organizing seven new battalions. The guard has 14 regiments and is organizing five more. Each regiment has three battalions, two of which are to operate 90-millimeter (3½-inch) guns, and also the complex "directors," which by sound-focusing determine the location of enemy planes.

Voluntary Enlistments Fail to Hit Army Goal

Voluntary enlistments have failed to raise the army to its authorized strength, Senator Lodge (rep., Mass.) said, and congress should adopt a compulsory selective service law so that "this period shall not be known as the Chamberlain era in American history."

Discussing the $1,777,489,788 emergency defense appropriation bill, which carried funds for 95 thousand additional enlistments to bring the army up to 375 thousand men, Lodge expressed his belief this nation should have an army of 750 thousand.

Lodge submitted this quota, enlistment and population figures for the Seventh Corps area: Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, population 16,867,000. Original May 16-June 30 quota, 972; 11th revision 1,062; June 16 enlistments, 649; remainder, 413; July 1-August 31 quota, 3,000; quota for army of 375 thousand (tentative), 7,600.

'Look to Courts,' Witnesses Told

Lincoln, June 26 (AP)—The courts are the proper recourse for complaints against police treatment, Governor R. L. Cochran advised a group of Jehovah's Witnesses by the letter today. An appeal to the governor from the group at Grand Island was signed by Oliver Siebenlist.

Siebenlist declared the group was imprisoned and refused the right of assembly guaranteed by the state and national constitutions. Cochran wrote: "The executive branch of the government does not have authority to impose its authority and judgment over that of local law enforcement agencies. The courts are the proper recourse for such appeals."
